

ENDANGERED SPECIES ASSESSMENT AND STRATEGIC SUPPORT

*Determining Risk to Species Listed Under
the Endangered Species Act (ESA)*

Spatial Analysis and Focus on "Best Available Data"

Compliance Services International has brought our clients' regulatory success and technical strength in addressing the complex interface of FIFRA and ESA for over 20 years, and has a combination of technical experience and regulatory insight in species assessment that is rare to find elsewhere. We are equipped with the spatial, regulatory and risk assessment know-how to serve our clients' needs in:

Project Scoping

Project scoping and analysis provides clients with an idea of what can be expected from EPA's evaluations and help them to prepare more realistic work plans. We focus on using "best available" species and pesticide use location data, analyze label instructions, incorporate and build on screening-level risk assessment results to ensure that subsequent work is comprehensive and defensible.

Agency Interaction

CSI has a proven record of regulatory success with multiple organization-levels within the USEPA, USFWS, NMFS and USDA and we are able to engage the agencies throughout the evaluation process. These interactions focus on obtaining feedback on data sources, processes, and outcomes in support of our clients' products and needs.

Spatial Analysis

Our expertise in GIS technology, knowledge of risk assessment and species biology combine in an unparalleled way to support each step of the analysis process. We generate spatial data products that can identify potential areas at risk, model scenarios, provide workable solutions, and effectively communicate outcomes. Our GIS team was recently relied upon by USEPA and USFWS through a task force client, FESTF, to generate species range maps for all listed species, which means we know the data and how to effectively use it.

Mitigation Options

We work with clients to identify areas where exposure is likely to occur and explore potential options to help mitigate risk. Our focus is on helping our clients to understand potential impacts of various mitigations, providing them with information and solutions that are invaluable in the registration process and beyond.

Information Management and Reporting

CSI strives to ensure effective data management and reporting. We pride ourselves on data submissions that provide thoroughly documented and fully defensible data to support the continued registration of our clients' products.
